Tom Maronick is a Maryland-based trial attorney whose practice focuses on criminal defense, DUI defense, serious personal injury and accident cases, bankruptcy, family law, and complex business matters. He also collaborates with other firms on high-stakes medical malpractice litigation. Every aspect of his work is shaped by his guiding principle: “Our most important client is each and every client we represent.”

Mr. Maronick has handled numerous high-profile criminal cases that have drawn national and regional media attention, including coverage in The New York Times. His work spans complex matters involving sex crimes, firearms charges, and financial crimes, resulting in major jury trial victories, significant plea agreements, and notable case dismissals. These outcomes have reinforced his reputation as a formidable and strategic advocate in some of Maryland’s most challenging legal cases.

Alongside his litigation practice, Mr. Maronick has become a highly sought-after legal analyst. He regularly provides expert commentary on major legal developments for national and regional media outlets, including CNN, USA Today, and The Baltimore Sun. He has offered legal analysis on widely covered cases such as the Justin Tucker allegations and the Luigi Mangione murder case, earning recognition for his ability to clearly explain complex legal issues and their broader implications. Through both his practice and media presence, he continues to influence conversations surrounding criminal defense and justice in Maryland and beyond.

Mr. Maronick has litigated cases throughout the State of Maryland and is licensed to practice in Maryland state and federal courts, the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, and is a proud member of the United States Supreme Court Bar. His career includes defending a Baltimore City police officer in a nationally televised assault case and representing a client in a federal gun case that resulted in a government appeal and ultimately drew consideration by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Mr. Maronick has earned BBB accreditation and Lead Counsel recognition. In 2025, he was recognized as a Maryland Super Lawyer, earned a “Superb” Avvo rating of 10.0+, and was named to the National Trial Lawyers Top 100. He was selected in 2014 to The Daily Record's VIP List, recognizing professionals who are "Successful by 40." In 2013, he was named one of Annapolis’ “40 Finest” by the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

He is a native of Baltimore, Maryland, having graduated from the University of Baltimore School of Law in 2006, and from the University of Maryland, College Park, in 2000 for his Bachelor of Arts in Journalism.

Mr. Maronick formerly worked in journalism before entering his legal career. He continues to write newspaper columns, hosts a weekly radio show, and sings in a jazz band in his spare time.

Nick Copper | Associate
Criminal/Intake/Client Relations

Nick Copper joins Maronick Law following a long tenure of legal, legislative, and lobbying work in and around Maryland State government. Most recently, Nick served as the lead budgetary consultant at premier Annapolis-based lobbying firm Evans and Associates, LLC. While working at Evans and Associates, Nick lent his budget expertise to such high-profile clients as Verizon, the Prince George's County Council, and the Maryland Transportation Builders and Materials Association. For two sessions of the Maryland General Assembly, Nick lobbied on behalf of his clients not only for increased funding in key areas of the Maryland state budget, but also for policy initiatives of importance across all aspects of Maryland state law.

Before joining the Annapolis lobbying corps, Nick spent most of the Hogan-Rutherford Administration as the Deputy Chief of Staff within one of the most important State agencies, the Department of Budget and Management. Hand-selected by then-Secretary Brinkley to join the Department, Nick supervised the production of the annual budget books featuring the details of the State budget proposal Governor Hogan submitted every year in office. He also served as the agency's public relations director and public information officer, spending six years honing the very communications skills that he now employed at Maronick Law in service of keeping the firm's clients calm, comfortable, and content.

Nick is also proud to have attended Loyola Blakefield High School, the same alma mater as Senior Partner Tom Maronick. Nick has consistently maintained throughout his life that the education he received there—academic, personal, and spiritual—is the primary driver behind who he is today. Thanks to Loyola, Nick was able to graduate from college in three years, finish law school a semester early, and excel in whatever professional environment he has found himself, now including Maronick Law.

Nick lives with his wife of five years, their two children, and their beloved cat in Baltimore County. Nick fancies himself a unique type of creature in today's world—able to debate the virtues of the Orioles lineup and the faults of the Ravens receiving corps with just as much passion as he can the most recent comic book movie or Star Wars television series. Nick and his wife, a special needs educator, can occasionally be found attempting to make people laugh as two of the members of Drop Three, a Baltimore-based comedy/improv troupe, currently in residence at Fells Point Corner Theatre.

James Thomas Ryan | Of Counsel

James Ryan is a seasoned attorney with a rich background in law enforcement and an extensive education in criminal justice and law. He holds a Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice from the University of Maryland University College, complemented by a Master of Business Administration from Saint Joseph's University, and a Juris Doctorate from the Mitchell Hamline School of Law. His training is further enhanced by graduation from the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center's Uniform Police Training Course and the Maryland Police and Correctional Training Commission's Police Certification Course. Additionally, James has completed the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's Standard Field Sobriety Test course, equipping him with unique skills in DUI/DWI legal defense.

Bringing nearly two decades of experience in law enforcement to his legal practice, James possesses a deep understanding of both the intricacies of law enforcement procedures and the subtleties of legal defense. This unique blend of education and practical experience enables him to effectively identify and exploit weaknesses in the state's cases against his clients, particularly in areas involving criminal charges. His expertise is not just in navigating the legal landscape but in ensuring that every piece of state evidence is meticulously examined and challenged, providing his clients with robust defense strategies tailored to their cases.
